

2. Infrastructure Protection through Industry Cooperation and Information Sharing. Sector-by-sector cooperation and information sharing would take place in the context of partnerships between owners and operators and government. These partnerships would identify and share best practices. The National Institute of Standards and Technology, the National Security Agency, and the Department of Energy's National Laboratories would provide technical skills and expertise required to identify and evaluate vulnerabilities in the associated information networks and control systems. Sector cooperation might begin with sharing information and techniques related to risk management assessments. This could evolve into the development and deployment of ways to prevent attacks, and if attacks occur, to mitigate damage, quickly recover services, and reconstitute the infrastructure.

3. Reconsideration of Laws Related to Infrastructure Protection. Some laws capable of promoting infrastructure assurance efforts are not as clear or effective as they could be. Others operate in ways that may be unfriendly to security concerns. Sorting them all out will be a lengthy and complex undertaking, involving efforts at local, state, federal, and international levels. The report identifies specific existing laws that could be modified to support infrastructure protection.

4. A Revised Program of Research and Development. While some of the basic technology needed to improve infrastructure protection already exists, it is not yet widely deployed. In all areas of activities aimed at protecting and assuring the infrastructure, mitigating damages, and responding and recovering from attacks, additional research effort is needed. The Commission recommends increasing government spending in research and development on capabilities such as intrusion detection.

5. A National Organization Structure. To implement the recommendations the following new organizations and revised roles for existing organizations are recommended:

Office of National Infrastructure Assurance as the top-level policy making office connected closely to the National Security Council and the National Economic Council;

Infrastructure Assurance Support Office to house the bulk of the staff that would be responsible for follow-through on the Commission's recommendations;

Information Sharing and Analysis Center to begin the step-by-step process of establishing a realistic understanding of distinguishing actual attacks from coincidental events;

National Infrastructure Assurance Council of industry CEOs, Cabinet Secretaries, and representatives of state and local government to provide policy advice and implementation commitment;

Lead Agencies, designated within the Federal government, to serve as a conduit from the government into each sector and to facilitate the creation of sector coordinators, if needed; and

Sector Coordinators to provide the focus for industry cooperation and information sharing, and to represent the sector in matters of national cooperation and policy;

Warning Center to identify anomalous events indicating that the infrastructure is under attack and alert the Information Sharing and Analysis Center for dissemination of bulletins and threat advisories to infrastructure stakeholders.

Under Secretary of Commerce, Bureau of Export Administration.
