

is crucial that we define the scope of our authority under Section 202(a).

I fully support the Notice of Intent to Consult and look forward to our discussions with state commissioners and, later on, with other parties. This dialogue is important and necessary. However, I do not want the Commission to lose sight of fundamental, threshold issues pertaining to the establishment of regional boundaries and the formation of RTOs. I therefore respectfully concur with this decision.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Authorities

This public process is being conducted pursuant to the Department of Energy Organization Act (42 U.S.C. 7101, et seq.); the Reclamation Act of 1902 (43 U.S.C. 371, et seq.), as amended and supplemented by subsequent enactments, particularly section 9(c) of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (43 U.S.C. 485h(c)); and other acts specifically applicable to the projects involved.

Background

Western is a Federal power marketing administration, charged with the responsibility of marketing electricity generated by power plants operated by the Bureau of Reclamation, the Corps of Engineers, and the International Boundary and Water Commission. Created in 1977, Western markets on a wholesale basis and transmits Federal hydroelectric power throughout 1.3 million square miles to more than 600 customers, including rural electric cooperatives, municipal utilities, public utility districts, Federal and State agencies, and irrigation districts. Western's power customers, in turn, provide service to millions of consumers in 15 western States.

Western markets power on a project-specific basis. A marketing plan for each project is developed through a public process, with opportunity for comment on a marketing proposal before publication of the final marketing plan in the Federal Register. Reclamation law governs how Western markets electricity, including the requirement that Western offer power first to non-profit entities such as rural electric cooperatives and municipalities.

In the first decade of Western's existence, marketing plans were relatively inflexible. Unless new generation was available, the amount of power made available for potential new customers was relatively small. Contracts with terms up to 30 years were negotiated and signed. No capability existed under contracts to adjust Western's marketable resources in the event that power plant operational changes were necessary due to environmental considerations.

In recent years, Western added more flexibility to its marketing policies and power sales contracts. On October 20, 1995, Western adopted a final rule for the Energy Planning and Management Program (Program) (60 FR 54151), which established a framework for the project-specific allocation of hydropower. Pursuant to the Program, Western signed resource extension contracts with existing customers for the sale of power from the Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin Program-Eastern Division and the Loveland Area Projects. These 20-year contracts contain withdrawal opportunities at 5 and 10 years to meet the needs of potential new customers and other purposes as determined by Western. Western also reserved the contractual ability to adjust power commitments in response to changes in operations and hydrology. In addition, Western has full flexibility to adjust its power rates under the terms of the contracts. Resource pools of up to 6 percent of the marketable resource were set aside to meet the needs of new customers, including Indian tribes.

While the Program did not immediately impact the marketing of power from the Central Valley Project (CVP), Washoe Project, and Salt Lake City Area Integrated Projects (SLCA/IP), Western anticipated that Program
