SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

As part of its mandate under Section 906 of the Social Security Act to establish a continuing and comprehensive program of research to evaluate the unemployment compensation system, the U.S. Department of Labor, Employment and Training Administration (ETA), is conducting a study of Unemployment Insurance (UI) exhaustees. This study is intended to examine the extent to which recent changes in the U.S. labor market have affected the composition of UI recipients who exhaust benefits and have influenced their postexhaustion labor market experiences. A further objective of the study is to explore recipients' experiences with the delivery of reemployment services and examine whether changes in the workforce development system have affected these experiences.

To meet these objectives, the study will: (1) Identify the factors that explain why recipients exhaust their UI benefit entitlements; (2) examine the labor market experiences of exhaustees and nonexhaustees; (3) assess the extent of recipients' participation in education, training, and reemployment services; (4) determine how patterns in recipient characteristics, labor market experiences, and participation in reemployment services have changed over time, especially over the past decade, and (5) consider the implications of the findings for UI benefit and reemployment services policies.

II. Current Actions

To examine these issues, ETA is planning to collect administrative records on UI and reemployment service receipt for random samples of UI recipients drawn from 25 States. ETA is also planning to collect survey data from a subsample of UI exhaustees and, for comparison purposes, a subsample of nonexhaustees. The survey will collect data items unavailable from administrative records. These data include detailed information on background characteristics of sample members, including the characteristics of their pre-UI jobs; information on their employment and earnings and job characteristics following receipt of UI; and information on their use of education, training, and reemployment services.

The Department of Labor is particularly interested in comments which:

- Evaluate whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the agency, including whether the information will have practical utility;
- Evaluate the accuracy of the agency's estimate of the burden of the proposed collection of information, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used;
- Enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and
- Minimize the burden of the collection of information on those who are to respond, including through the use of appropriate automated, electronic, mechanical, or other technological collection techniques or other forms of information technology, e.g., permitting electronic submissions of responses.
