Announcement of Public Meeting; Opportunity to Comment on Implications of Revised Bt Crops Reassessment for Regulatory Decisions Affecting These Products, and on Potential Elements of Regulatory Options

AGENCY: Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: EPA is currently engaged in a comprehensive reassessment of the time-limited registrations for all existing Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) corn and cotton plant-pesticides (also known as plant-incorporated protectants). This ² The Commission issued a tendering notice and solicitation for additional study requests for PGE's and the CTWS's license applications on December 28, 1999. On January 6, 2000, the Commission canceled the solicitation for additional study requests in anticipation of the joint final amendment filed on June 29, 2001. We now establish the deadline for additional study requests as 60 days from the date of filing of the joint amendment.

reassessment has been designed to assure that the decisions on the renewal and/or extension of these registrations are based on the most current scientific data (including recently reviewed non-target impact data), and incorporates recommendations made by the FIFRA Scientific Advisory Panel (SAP) and any public comments received by the Agency. II. Background and Explanation of Actions Being Taken

A. Revised Risk and Benefit Sections and Draft Risk Mitigation and Regulatory Options Section

This notice announces the opportunity for public comment on the implications of EPA's revised risk and benefit sections of the Bt crops reassessment. The risk and benefit sections have been revised based on the recent SAP report on the preliminary risk and benefit sections, as well as in response to public comment surrounding the regulatory decisions affecting these products.

Although the Agency's conclusions regarding risk to the Monarch butterfly are available, the Agency's analysis of Monarch butterfly risk is undergoing a CBI substantiation process due to claims of confidentiality by the data submitters. The Agency is working on a priority basis to resolve this issue.

The Agency anticipates to release prior to the July 24th technical briefing, a document discussing potential risk mitigation and regulatory options with questions to be considered by the public. In addition, EPA will be holding a briefing for the public on these documents on July 24, 2001, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Sheraton Hotel Crystal City, 1800 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, VA.

EPA encourages other submissions of potential risk mitigation and regulatory options at the public meeting and during the comment period. To encourage public participation and dialog, EPA will place all comments and proposals in the public docket, and, if possible, will also place all comments and proposals on the Biopesticides web site at: www.epa.gov/pesticides/biopesticides. In addition, EPA is likely to develop additional documents regarding this reassessment and will also make these documents available through the public docket and the Biopesticides web site.

B. Overall Bt Crops Reassessment

EPA is currently engaged in a comprehensive reassessment of the time-limited registrations for all existing Bt corn and cotton plant-pesticides. This reassessment has been designed to assure that the decisions on the renewal and/or extension of these registrations are based on the most current scientific data. Current registrations are set to expire September 30, 2001. As part of EPA's reassessment, the Agency will decide whether to extend the registrations and, if so, whether to include any additional terms and conditions in such registrations on issues that could include insect resistance management, compliance mechanisms, and the protection of non-target organisms among other measures.

During this reassessment, EPA is committed to conducting an open and transparent public process that incorporates sound and current science, public involvement, and balanced decision-making. The major components of the process and time frames for action are as follows:

1. Comprehensive risk and benefit assessments. This review incorporated consideration of all available scientific information on Bt products, including results of recent scientific studies and recommendations from various individuals and organizations.

2. Scientific peer review and public comment. After completing the scientific risk assessment, the Agency provided the registrants of the products an opportunity to review the risk assessment and suggest technical corrections to the Agency. After technical corrections were made, EPA released the risk assessments and invited public comment and scientific peer review. That release included EPA's regulatory assessment and the underlying data, along with registrants' technical error correction comments and the corrective actions taken by the Agency. All of these materials were placed in the Bt crop reassessment docket.

3. Recommendations from the SAP, National Academy of Sciences, public comments, and the Administration-wide review. Since there are many organizations providing regulatory and scientific recommendations, EPA used the time since the SAP report was issued in March to consider and incorporate these recommendations into our revised risk and benefit assessments, as appropriate. This included recommendations and comments from the public, from the SAP on insect resistance management, and on ecological and public health aspects of our regulatory program, along with consideration of issues identified from the report released by the National Academy of Sciences titled: "Genetically Modified Pest-Protected Plants, Science and Regulation" and from the Administration-wide review.

4. Revised risk and benefits assessments and proposed regulatory options. EPA has considered all of the public comments and the recommendations from the SAP in revising the risk and benefit assessments, and in developing elements to be included in risk mitigation and the potential options for regulatory decisions. EPA will hold a technical briefing to describe the revised scientific reassessment and take comments on potential regulatory options.

5. Final decisions on Bt registrations. This will complete the scientific and public process. EPA will continue to take public comments for 45 days from publication of this Notice before announcing any registration decisions regarding these Bt plant-pesticides for future growing seasons on or before September 30, 2001.
