

opportunity to disseminate information and materials via the Internet. Today, rapid technological changes of the World-Wide Web warrant on-going constituent and resource analysis. With survey data, the NIH is enabled to serve, and respond to, the ever-changing demand by the public. The 'public' includes individuals (such as patients, health professionals, educators, and scientists), interested communities (such as national or local organizations/institutions) and businesses. Survey information will augment current Web content, delivery, and design research that is used to understand the needs of the Web user, and more specifically, the NIH user community. Primary objectives are to: (1) Classify NIH

Internet users; (2) summarize and better understand customer needs; and (3) quantify the effectiveness/efficiency of current tools and delivery. Overall, the Institutes, Centers, and Offices of the NIH will use the survey results to identify strengths and weaknesses in current Internet strategies. Findings will help to: (1) Understand the user community and how to better serve Internet users; (2) discover areas requiring improvement in either content or delivery; (3) realize how to align Web offerings with identified user need(s); and (4) explore methods to offer and deliver information with efficacy and equity. Frequency of Response: On occasion [As needed on an on-going and potentially concurrent basis (by
