

peptide (PAMP), two potent angiogenic factors that are products of the same gene. Therapies that reduce (antagonize) the action of these factors have the potential to treat conditions where angiogenesis plays a pathological role, such as cancer and macular degeneration. Conversely, increasing (agonizing) the action of these factors may be useful for conditions where enhanced angiogenesis is desired, such as wound healing and cardiovascular disease. Adrenomedullin and PAMP have also been shown to play a role in other diseases, such as neurodegenerative disorders, diabetes, and allergic and inflammatory disease.

More specifically, these technologies include peptides, antibodies and small molecules that agonize or antagonize the activity of adrenomedullin and PAMP. They also include methods for inhibiting or inducing angiogenesis, methods for inhibiting tumor growth, methods for treating cancer, and methods of treating a number of other conditions, such as wounds, neurological disease, allergic or inflammatory disease, diabetes, and cardiovascular disease.

The prospective exclusive license will be royalty-bearing and will comply with the terms and conditions of 35 U.S.C. 209 and 37 CFR 404.7. The prospective exclusive license may be granted unless, within 60 days from the date of this published Notice, the NIH receives written evidence and argument that establishes that the grant of the license would not be consistent with the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 209 and 37 CFR 404.7.

Applications for a license in the prospective field of use filed in response to this notice will be treated as objections to the grant of the contemplated exclusive license.
