To be considered, applicants must demonstrate, at a minimum: (1) In-depth knowledge of the purpose, functions, and operational complexities of local jails, (2) awareness of the diversity among local jails in terms of size, resources, and levels of sophistication, (3) in-depth knowledge of the six elements of inmate behavior management, as defined by NIC, and (4) ability to develop and write documents for publication.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: NIC has identified six key elements in effectively managing inmate behavior in jails:

(1) Assessing the risks and needs of each inmate at various points during his/her detention, (2) assigning inmates to appropriate housing, (3) meeting inmates' basic needs, (4) defining and conveying expectations for inmate behavior, (5) supervising inmates, and (6) keeping inmates productively occupied. If a jail fully and properly implements all six elements, it should experience a significant reduction in the negative inmate behaviors often experienced in jails, such as vandalism, violence, rule violations, and disrespectful behavior toward staff and other inmates. Applicants can obtain additional information on inmate behavior management by reviewing NIC's "Inmate Behavior Management: The Key to a Safe and Secure Jail." This document is available at <http://nicic.gov/Library/023882>.

The NIC Jails Division offers training and technical assistance on inmate behavior management. It has also begun to develop a series of guides on implementing each of the six elements. This document will be part of the series.

Scope of Work

Document Length: The number of pages will be determined by content. The document will include appendices and a bibliography.

Document Audience: Jail administrators are the primary audience, but the document may also be used by other management staff. This guide is intended for use by jails of all sizes. In developing the document, the awardee must consider the diversity of jails in terms of size, available resources, and level of sophistication.

Document Distribution: NIC expects to distribute the document widely. It will be available on the NIC Web site and upon request free of charge through the NIC Information Center.

Document Content: The document will be a clear and practical guide for jail administrators. It will begin with a brief overview of the six elements of inmate behavior management, drawn from NIC's "Inmate Behavior Management: The Key to a Safe and Secure Jail." This will be followed by a more detailed discussion of the first element, assessing inmates' risks and needs, including its importance in managing inmate behavior and its relationship to the other five elements. The document will then introduce the use of face-to-face interviews in determining inmates' risks and needs and explain the importance of interviewing to gaining more complete and accurate information. The document should also highlight anecdotal evidence or research that demonstrates the usefulness of interviews in risk-and-need assessment specifically and inmate behavior management generally.

Once this context is set, the document will address the following topics, at a minimum: (1) Specific interview techniques and tools, (2) the interview environment, (3) skills required of the interviewer, (4) strategies for developing staff skills in conducting interviews, with sample training tools, (5) policies, procedures, and required documentation related to interviews, with samples of each, (6) determination of reasonable standards for the interview process and its outcomes, and (7) assessment of the quality of the interview process and the achievement of outcomes, with sample assessment tools.

NIC Review: The awardee will send the following for NIC review and approval: initial framework for the document, first draft of the document, subsequent drafts based on NIC's suggested revisions, and the final draft.

Final Product: The awardee will produce a completed document that has received initial editing from a professional editor. The awardee must follow the Guidelines for Preparing and Submitting Manuscripts for Publication as found in the "General Guidelines for Cooperative Agreements," which will be included in the award package. The awardee will deliver the final product to NIC in hard copy and on disk in Word format. NIC will be responsible for the final editing process and document design, but the awardee will remain available during this time to answer questions and to make revisions to the document. The awardee must also ensure that all products meet NIC's standards for accessibility and Section 508 compliance.

Meetings: The cooperative agreement awardee will attend an initial meeting with the NIC staff for a project overview and preliminary planning. This will take place shortly after the cooperative agreement is awarded and will be held in Washington, DC. The meeting will last one day.

The awardee should plan to meet with NIC staff up to four times during the course of the cooperative agreement. One meeting will be held in Washington, DC. The others may be held by WebEx or in person, depending on meeting content.
