

at river mile 3 (river km 4.8) and the Deschutes River at river mile 165 (river km 265.5). TID's water rights consist of 201.75 cfs from Tumalo Creek and 9.5 cfs of natural flow from the Deschutes River. TID also has rights to stored water in Crescent Lake Reservoir. The irrigation season usually runs from April through October. Peak diversions normally reach about 190 cfs during the months of May, June and July but begin to decrease in late July. Flow diverted from Tumalo Creek is conveyed via the Tumalo Feed Canal. Diversion rates from Tumalo Creek range between 40 and 70 cfs in April and increase steadily through May with peak diversion between 130 and 150 cfs during the months of May and June, diminishing to about 50 cfs by September.

Flow diverted by TID from the Deschutes River is conveyed via the Bend Feed Canal. Diversion rates are at or near 10 cfs in April and gradually increase May through July. Starting in about mid-July and running through September, the majority of TID diversions (about 60 percent) are taken from the Deschutes River, reaching roughly 120 cfs. During the off-season (November through March), diversions into TID are eliminated except for occasional stock runs of about 50 to 60 cfs to fill stock ponds.

TID conducts all maintenance activities during the off-season with the exception of year round removal of debris and the need for emergency repairs. Maintenance actions include repair and improvements to diversion structures and canals, occasional (every few years) dredging behind diversion dams, removing vegetation from canals and ditches, and inspection of flow measurement instrumentation. Both the Tumalo Creek and Deschutes River diversions are fitted with fish screens, so all maintenance on these structures occur during the off-season.

TID has installed pipe in a portion of the Tumalo Feed Canal and proposes to complete piping the remaining open sections (about 6 miles (9.65 km) of canal) by October 31, 2015. Once completed, TID estimates that approximately 20 cfs of water will be conserved that is now lost through evaporation and seepage. Upon completion of piping, the conserved water will be transferred to the State of Oregon for permanent instream water use in the form of senior water rights. This will increase flow in Tumalo Creek and the Deschutes River below Tumalo Creek by about 11.8 cfs during the irrigation season and is expected to cool water in the Deschutes by roughly 1 degree Fahrenheit (0.56 degrees C). The remaining 8.2 cfs will be in the form of stored water rights in Crescent Lake Reservoir and will be used by the State of Oregon to supplement flows in Crescent Creek and the Deschutes River.

To improve monitoring of its diversion rates, TID will replace an existing flow and temperature measurement structure located in Tumalo Creek downstream of the Tumalo Feed Canal diversion. The existing structure does not give accurate measurements when flows are high. TID will also install a meter in the Tumalo Feed Canal downstream of its confluence with the Bend Feed Canal to measure the combined diversion rate. TID will submit yearly progress reports to NMFS and the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife.

Historically, MCR steelhead did not occur in Tumalo Creek or the reach of the Deschutes River where TID diverts water. The upstream limit for anadromous fish, including MCR steelhead, in the Deschutes River was Big Falls at about river mile 132 (river km 212.4). Tumalo Creek enters the Deschutes River roughly 28 river miles (45.1 km) upstream of Big Falls and the Deschutes River diversion is about 33 river miles (53.1 km) above Big Falls. MCR steelhead are not being reintroduced above this natural barrier.

NMFS may approve the HCP as a low effect HCP, as provided in the Habitat Conservation Planning Handbook (NMFS and USFWS 1996).

Determination of low effect HCPs is based upon the plan having: Minor or negligible effects on Federally-listed, proposed, or candidate species and their habitats; minor or negligible effects on other environmental values or resources; and, impacts that considered together with the impacts of other past, present, and reasonably foreseeable similarly situated projects would not result, over time, in cumulative effects to the environmental values or resources which would be considered significant. If the plan qualifies as a low-effect HCP, the NEPA consideration would be covered by a categorical exclusion, and NMFS would not need to conduct further analysis.

Type of Review: Revision.

Title of Collection: Impact Evaluation of Race to the Top and School Improvement Grants.

OMB Control Number: 1850-0884.

Agency Form Number(s): N/A.

Frequency of Responses: Once.

Affected Public: State, Local or Tribal Government.

Total Estimated Number of Annual Responses: 1,529.

Total Estimated Annual Burden Hours: 2,459.

Abstract: This OMB package requests clearance for data collection, analysis, and reporting activities from 50 states and the District of Columbia, and approximately 134 districts and 1,200 schools as part of an evaluation of Race to the Top (RTT) and School Improvement Grants (SIG). The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act contained substantial funding for systemic education reform. This included $4 billion in RTT grants, which were awarded to 11 states and the District of Columbia based both on their education reform plans and their past success in creating the conditions for reform, and $3 billion in additional funding for SIG, which is aimed at implementing one of four school turnaround models (STMs) in the lowest-performing schools. The evaluation is designed to (1) study the implementation of RTT and SIG; (2) analyze the impact of SIG- or RTT-funded STMs on student outcomes
