

that were originally manufactured with PCBs (e.g., paint or caulk). Labeling the building materials a different type of PCB waste than PCB bulk product waste (e.g., paint or caulk) can result in slower and more costly removal and disposal. This proposed reinterpretation maintains existing environmental and human health protections and removes unnecessary burdens to allow for more expedient cleanups, thus reducing potential exposures, for example, in schools and commercial buildings.

In particular, protecting children's health from environmental risks is fundamental to EPA's mission. Caulks and paints containing PCBs were used in building some schools from 1950 to 1978. The proposed reinterpretation will help to promote healthy school environments by reducing exposure to PCBs in schools.

III. Summary of Proposed Reinterpretation

Current EPA guidance states that building material contaminated by the migration of PCBs from PCB bulk product waste, such as caulk or paint, is considered a PCB remediation waste. The proposed reinterpretation would modify this guidance to specify that only PCB-contaminated building material from which the PCB bulk product has been removed from the substrate is a PCB remediation waste. That is, the distinction lies in whether or not the PCB bulk product is still attached to the building materials.

The reinterpretation being proposed in this notice would allow building material (i.e., substrate) "coated or serviced" with PCB bulk product waste (e.g., caulk, paint, mastics, sealants) at the time of disposal to be managed as a PCB bulk product waste, even if the PCBs have migrated from the overlying bulk product waste into the substrate, provided there is no other source of PCB contamination on or in the substrate. However, if the substrate is not "coated or serviced" (i.e., the PCB bulk product waste, such as caulk or paint has been removed from the building material) at the time of disposal and the substrate is contaminated with PCBs that have migrated from the bulk product waste (or from another unauthorized disposal), the substrate would be considered a PCB remediation waste. EPA is seeking comment on this proposed reinterpretation in its position.

Finally, we would note that there may be instances where additional hazardous constituents are present and should be considered in making cleanup decisions. In addition, site-specific factors may influence how to manage these PCB wastes. Consideration of these constituents and site-specific factors, and coordination with appropriate regulators is important to ensure safe practices. Therefore, in such situations, we believe that the appropriate EPA regional office and regional PCB coordinator should be consulted as necessary for assistance with making these decisions. For instance, property owners have identified instances where PCB caulk contained high levels of other hazardous constituents, such as asbestos. Similarly, there are cases where PCB paint has been found to contain high levels of leachable metals. In such situations, care must be taken to determine the appropriate disposal option.

Please see the epa.gov/pcb Web page for further information and for instruction regarding how to submit comments. EPA will accept comments for 30 days from the date published in the Federal Register.
