

consumer revokes it in writing or, if the consumer agrees, electronically. When a customer relationship terminates, the customer's opt out direction continues to apply.

The OCC issued part 40, including the consumer opt-out provisions, in 2000 to implement new requirements imposed by the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act. At the time part 40 was promulgated, the OCC used nominal burden estimates. Because the requirements were new, both the OCC and national banks lacked experience concerning how institutions would comply with the opt-out requirements and the extent to which consumers would exercise their ability to opt out. The OCC is now revisiting its estimates to determine how they could be made more accurate.

The OCC does not require its institutions to report the percentage of consumers choosing to opt out. Absent this information, we estimate that between 2% and 12% of consumers with new mortgages or credit cards and 1% of consumers with deposit accounts under $100,000 will opt out under part 40. While we understand that an increase in the number of consumers opting out is likely to increase the burden on the industry due to the processing time associated with the additional opt outs, we have not adjusted our burden estimates for the industry because we do not have reliable figures about the rate of opt outs.

Therefore, we estimate that between 3 and 17.9 million consumers will opt out. Our estimates set forth in this notice reflect the midpoint of 9 million. We invite comment on our estimates for both consumers and the industry and welcome any other information—particularly information about consumer opt-out rates—that might assist us in making them more accurate.
