SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

The American Community Survey (ACS), implemented in November 1995, is a continuing full-scale operation of a continuous measurement system. Continuous Measurement is a reengineering of the method for collecting the housing and socioeconomic data traditionally collected in the decennial census. It provides data every year instead of once in ten years. It blends the strength of small area estimation from the census with the quality and timeliness of the continuing surveys through a large monthly survey.

The data from the ACS will determine the feasibility of a continuous measurement system that provides socioeconomic data on a continual basis throughout the decade for small areas and small subpopulations.

The ACS is presently conducted in eight survey sites—Fulton County, Pennsylvania; Rockland County, New York; Brevard County, Florida; Multnomah County, Oregon, including the city of Portland; Douglas County, Nebraska; Otero County, New Mexico; Harris and Fort Bend Counties, Texas; and Franklin County, Ohio. The data collected in this survey will be within the general scope and nature of those inquiries covered in the decennial census every ten years.

The continuing research through the American Community Survey of the feasibility of a continuous measurement system in 1998 will include the present survey sites and additional sites in Richland and Kershaw Counties, South Carolina and Broward County, Florida. No changes to the forms used in the ACS or our field operations are proposed.

II. Method of Collection

In the urban areas, the Census Bureau will mail questionnaires to households selected for the ACS. In the rural sites where city-style addresses are not available, Field Representatives will deliver the questionnaires to the household. Participation of the selected households is mandatory in accordance with the provisions of Title 13. For those households not returning the questionnaire, we will collect household information by both telephone interview and personal visit.
